ADMISSION.

Candidates for admission to these courses of instruction must pass a satisfactory examination in Reading, Spelling, Mental and Written Arithmetic, and English Grammar. Those deficient in some one department—if advanced students in other studies—may, by permission, enter the class.

German may be substituted for French. Other substitutes are allowed, but none of these branches will give place to the ornamentals.

General Information.

Location and Means of Access.

THIS Academy is located on an eminence in the village of East Greenwich, pleasantly situated on the western shore of Narragansett Bay. The scenery is of surpassing beauty, presenting a view of both shores of the Bay, with its peninsulas and islands, covered with cultivated farms and beautiful residences, and, more remotely, of various towns and cities in Rhode Island and Massachusetts; while in the rear and on either side are extensive inland views of fields and forests.

The healthfulness of the location is proverbial. Being in the southern section of New England, the place enjoys a climate more mild and equable than the Eastern States generally; the winds being tempered by the ocean, which, though not far away, is not so near as to impart the usual harshness to breezes blowing from the sea. The harbor affords superior facilities for salt-water bathing, and the Bay gives ample opportunity for the exercise and recreation of sailing and rowing.

Pupils from the interior requiring a change of air may here pursue their studies under the most salutary hygienic conditions. It is two hours' ride from Boston, and six from New York, by express trains which arrive and leave several times daily, except Sunday. Newport, twenty miles distant, is easily accessible by rail and steamboat; and there is connection with Providence many times a day.

Students can take the noon train at New York, by the Shore Line, have their baggage checked through, and reach here the same evening; or they can take the evening steamer via Long Island Sound, for Stonington, where it connects with the morning train for this place.

Buildings and Grounds.

The Academy grounds contain five acres, giving an ample play-ground and a lawn beautifully laid out, and ornamented with trees and shrubbery. Upon these grounds stand the Boarding Hall, Windsor House, and the Academy. The Academy building is a tasteful, substantial structure, and is believed to be unsurpassed in any institution of the same grade. It contains ample and commodious recitation rooms, besides parlor, office, library, reading-room, cabinet, and one of the finest seminary chapels in New England. Much needed improvements have recently been made, amounting to over $20,000.

A new heating apparatus has been put into the Boarding Hall, of a capacity sufficient to warm the entire building; and a laundry, with bath-rooms and other conveniences, has been added.

Heating and Lighting.

The buildings throughout are warmed with steam and lighted with gas, thus saving the student all the annoyance of caring for fires and lights.

Libraries, Cabinet, and Museum.

The Academy Library contains about twenty-five hundred volumes.

The Cabinet of Geological and Mineralogical specimens, and the Museum, illustrating the history, habits and customs of various nations, embrace about three thousand specimens, and are rarely surpassed in variety and completeness.

Members of the school also have access to the excellent Free Public Library of the town, which is but a few rods from the Academy grounds.

Apparatus.

The Philosophical and Chemical Apparatus has been enlarged and improved, increasing its value over five hundred dollars. A set of English astronomical slides, showing the various real and apparent motions of the heavenly bodies; a French eudiometer; a powerful electric machine, with a twenty-four inch plate, Wightman's gasometers, and a fine set of gas bags, to be used with the Drummond Light, etc., are included.

Declamation and Composition.

Exercises in Declamation are required of the gentlemen, and in Composition of all the students: advanced students render these in public.

Oratory.

This department is under the supervision of Prof. LEWIS B. MONROE, Dean of the School of Oratory of Boston University. His original methods of instruction, and his national fame, are a guarantee for the highest training in this branch of preparation for public speaking.

Diplomas.

The Institution awards three Diplomas: one to each graduate in Liberal Learning; one to those completing the Musical Course; and one to the Commercial graduates. A charge of $2.00 will be made for the Diplomas.

Normal Instruction.

Much attention is given to the common English branches, and those which are called into requisition by the teachers of Public Schools. Special instruction is given from time to time, without extra charge, to those who are preparing for the teacher's office.

This Seminary has furnished more teachers for the Public Schools of the State than any other institution. It has constantly in attendance more gentlemen preparing for the profession of teachers than any institution in the State.

A Normal Class for those desiring to teach will be formed in the Fall Term.

Furnishings.

Each room is furnished with a bedstead and bedding, table, stand, chairs, pail, gas fixtures, and heating apparatus. Mirrors, wash-bowls, and pitchers are provided at a fair price; and if returned in good condition at the close of the term the price will be refunded. Students furnish brooms, sheets, pillow-cases, towels, napkins, curtains and carpets if they wish them. All, particularly ladies, are advised to carpet their rooms. Those who desire carpets and superior furnishings for their rooms can be accommodated at an extra charge. Students are responsible for any improprieties or damages committed in their rooms.

Students rooming alone will pay double price for light and heat.

Fifty cents' worth of washing is allowed each week without extra charge.

Every article for the wash should be distinctly marked with the owner's full name, in indelible ink.

Students furnish their own books and stationery, which are kept in the Institution, and supplied at fair prices.

Students occasionally diminish their expenses by boarding themselves, for which accommodations are easily procured in the village.

Opportunities for earning money by occasional labor in the place are common.

Travelling Expenses.

Students who desire to board at home, and come to school each day in the morning, and return in the afternoon, by way of the Stonington railroad, can obtain tickets at twenty-five per cent. less than the regular price.

Admission.

Candidates for admission must give evidence of sufficient advancement in the common English branches to enter the Seminary classes with advantage. Those entering one of the departments for graduation must be prepared to take up the studies of some regular class.

Satisfactory assurances of good moral character, and a willingness to abide by the regulations laid down for the government of the school, are required; and a candidate coming from another school must bring testimonials of good character and standing in such school. Students preparing for the ministry will find it to their advantage to communicate with the principal.

Note to Parents and Guardians.

☞ Students should enter school at the beginning of the term. Those coming a few days late are much embarrassed and embarrass others.

Students should not seek excuses during the term for the purpose of visiting at home or elsewhere, and in no case except when the most urgent considerations render absence unavoidable. A short absence occasions serious disadvantage.

Parents should not allow their children to leave the Academy for trifling causes, and should never give them permission to leave until after having consulted the Principal. Students should, if possible, reach here on Monday, as the classes will be permanently arranged on Tuesday and recitations will begin at that time.

It is earnestly advised that all moneys for the use of the younger students be deposited with some officer of the Academy, and that no expenditure be allowed except under the direction of such officer. Parents who understand the importance of this advice will not neglect it. The Officers will not feel responsible for evil habits acquired by students in consequence of neglect to heed this suggestion.

Government.

The methods of discipline employed are designed to cultivate in students the habit, and develop the power, of self-government. But few precepts are enjoined. The government is mild, yet firm and decided.

Association of ladies and gentlemen is permitted, on special application, as far as is thought consistent with studious habits. All association without special excuse is forbidden.

Attendance at church is required on the Sabbath, in the morning and afternoon, at some church in the village chosen for the term by the student's friends, or at such services as may be held in the Academy, in the place of one or both of these.

All the students are required to be present at public religious services, consisting of reading the Scriptures, singing and prayer, held daily in the chapel.

For the rest, deference to the authority of superiors and to the wishes of equals, neatness, quietness, and industry are inculcated, as essential characteristics of the scholarly lady or gentleman.

The intercourse of the students with each other and the Faculty is expected to conform to the usages of good society. Their admission to the school, and enjoyment of its privileges, imply a sacred contract, on their part, promptly to observe its regulations.

The young ladies are under the immediate supervision of an experienced Preceptress, who attends to their wants as students, and a Matron, who superintends their wardrobes and the demands of the table.

No intercourse with gentlemen students is allowed them, but by special permission, except at the table and in classes. On no occasion can students of the different sexes visit each other's rooms.

Students will not take less than three, or more than four studies at the same time, without special permission. They are expected to retire by ten o'clock, P.M.

The Principal, other teachers, and the students occupy the same building, and sit at the same table In this way the students have all the incentives and impulses of student life in a far greater degree than when they live apart or in private families, and have all the advantages of the constant watch, care, and assistance of teachers, as they cannot be had in any other mode of school-life.

Merit Roll.

A record is made of each student's daily recitations, also of deportment. Parents or guardians can obtain a copy of this account at any time by applying to the Principal. At the end of each half term every student's record is mailed to the father or guardian. If in any case it is not received within one week after the end of the half term, the Principal would like to know of the failure, and will send a second copy.

Courses of Study.

The College Preparatory Course embraces thorough instruction and drill in the studies required for admission to college. It is designed to prepare students to enter any American college or university.

The Classical Graduating Course is as comprehensive and thorough as that of most seminaries and female colleges. Gentlemen as well as ladies, who may wish to take a systematic academic course, can pursue this to graduation, and receive a Diploma.

In the Scientific Department, most of the branches are taught which are comprised in the corresponding department of a collegiate course.

In Drawing, Painting, Wax Work, the Fine Arts generally, and Modern Languages, superior advantages for instruction are afforded.

The courses of instruction in the Musical, Oratorical, and Commercial Departments are very thorough and exhaustive.

Students are earnestly advised to enter one of the regular courses, as in this systematic way more and better progress will be made.

Musical Institute.

The supervision of this important department has been committed to DR. EBEN TOURJEE, DIRECTOR of the celebrated NEW ENGLAND CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC at Boston, whose high reputation gives satisfactory assurance of its excellence in every respect. It is designed to afford superior advantages for pursuing the study of music, both as a science and an art.

An acquaintance with music, to some extent at least, has now become a necessary element of education.

As a science, it opens to the scholar a field of investigation most wonderful and beautiful; while as the language of the emotions and passions, as the medium for expressing the sublimest feelings of which the soul is capable, it is worthy the thought and study of the most intelligent minds.

Pupils of this Academy are earnestly solicited to avail themselves of the unusual facilities presented to them of acquiring that symmetrical culture which should result from carrying on the study of literature and music together.

The Conservatory, or limited class-system of instruction, practised in the best European and American music-schools, is adopted in this department.

Pupils taught in this manner learn thoroughly, and, by constantly performing before others, soon acquire the confidence and grace so essential to correct execution. The power of emulation is also fully developed in the class, as ability is matched with ability, mind comes in contact with mind, and intellect is sharpened by intellect.

Frequent lectures upon musical topics by competent authorities, concerts by the pupils, rehearsals of oratorio music, and at least once each term, a concert by leading artists, will be afforded to the music students without charge.

Course of Study.

Courses of study have been arranged with a view to the graduation of pupils in Piano-Forte and Organ playing, Cultivation of the Voice, and Harmony. The course in each department commences at the beginning; but pupils are assigned to the grade for which they are fitted by their abilities or previous attainments.

For full particulars regarding the prescribed course, see musical circular.

Piano-Forte.

Beginners, and pupils of every stage of advancement are received and assigned to classes in their respective grades. The utmost care is taken to train them thoroughly in all the details of technique, and to properly educate their taste by giving beautiful and attractive pieces from the standard composers for study, carefully excluding the sentimental class so much in vogue among inexperienced and incompetent teachers. The "New England Conservatory Piano Method" is made the basis of instruction. In addition are used studies by Loeschhorn, Kopler, Behrms, Heller, Czerny, Bertin, Cramer, and others; songs without words, by Mendelssohn, and selections from the works of classic and modern composers.

Organ-Playing.

Pupils intending to study for organists should first acquire considerable skill in playing the piano-forte. The correct position of the hands and the strength and flexibility of the fingers, which are alike indispensable to the pianist and organist, are far more easily gained at the piano than at the organ; while the ability to read music, and skill in execution upon the piano, enable the pupil to enter a higher grade, and to progress more rapidly, than would be possible were he to begin with the organ, and devote his attention wholly to it.

The course for the organ includes studies by Rink, Best, Lemmens, Whiting, Buck, and compositions by Mendelssohn, Seb. Bach, and other celebrated writers for the organ.

The Institute is provided with a fine two-manual Pipe Organ, with full set of pedals, and every requisite mechanical appliance, for lessons and practice.

Cultivation of the Voice and Solo Singing.

Instruction in this department comprises exercises for promoting the proper action of the respiratory organs; developing, strengthening, and uniting the registers; the study of the physiology of the vowels and consonants; the study of solfeggi, and the application of words to music; exercises for obtaining agility and flexibility of the voice; the practice of songs for the home circle, and the development of the voice to suit the requirements of the church and public assembly. The importance of proper vocal training, especially in a climate like ours, where abuse or neglect of the vocal organs is likely to be attended with so serious results, can hardly be over-estimated. Careful teachers, and the best and most judicious methods, will be employed in this department.

Harmony.

This department includes a perfect comprehension of the system of musical notation, the manner in which the major and minor tonalities are related to each other, and the relationship of the different keys or scales, a thorough practical and theoretical knowledge of intervals, and the construction of chords, with the artistic laws which regulate melodic and harmonic progressions.

Method of Instruction.

With only a common school education, the student is admitted at once into the Theoretical Department.

Where he is instructed in the elements of penmanship and letter-writing, drilled in the orthography and signification of mercantile and business terms, and introduced to the Theory of Accounts. Instruction at first is given from the blackboard, and Accounts in the various bearings are carefully and fully explained. He is then supplied with necessary blanks and books, and proceeds to write up five distinct sets of books, two of which represent partnership business. In this he becomes familiar with the Day Book, Journal, Cash Book, and Ledger. Meantime he is taught how to draw up Receipts, Notes, Drafts, Orders, Bills of Exchange, etc., to make out Account Sales, Accounts-Current, Invoices, etc., and weekly listens to lectures on topics connected with the studies. He thoroughly reviews the principles of journalizing, posting, making balance sheets and statements of a complete set of books; and if he is found to possess a clear understanding of the Science of Accounts, he is passed into the Practical Department,

Where he puts into practice the knowledge acquired in the Theoretical Department. In this there are four special divisions, the first of which is the Retail Department.

He is assigned his stand, furnished with books and an actual cash capital of three thousand dollars; he has access to a wholesale store, from which to purchase a stock of goods, to the bank, post, railroad and express offices; from the bank he receives his check books, deposit tickets, and certificate of deposit; from the stationer, blank forms of notes, drafts, bills of lading, bonds, mortgages, etc.; he deals in real estate, stocks, and all kinds of negotiable paper; he deposits money in the bank and checks it out; he makes shipments and receives consignments through the railroad and steamboat lines; he enters company business of from two to six partners; makes co-partnership settlements and assignments; in short, he here pursues a course of business that cannot fail to give him a clear insight into the regular transactions of life. Having sustained a satisfactory examination, he is received into the Wholesale Department.

In this he commences business with the assets and liabilities of his predecessors, and must always see that their books and balance sheets are correct before assuming the responsibility of the concern. The books used were taken from the very first wholesale houses in New York city. He uses the sales, shipping, invoice, inventory, and cash books, the journal, personal and representative ledgers. Thence he enters the Commission Department.

In this he puts up a set comprising a business of two months, and becomes familiar with the receiving, sales, and cash books, journal and ledger. This completed, he enters the Banking Department.

The bank is fitted up with every convenience. It is a regular bank of issue and deposit, and all the complicated transactions pertaining to banking are made here. Weekly statements are made and quarterly dividends declared. Money, notes, and drafts are deposited; drafts and checks are cashed; sums loaned, notes discounted, and acceptances made. On entering the bank the student is first collection clerk, then discount clerk, then second teller, first teller, and finally cashier. He is now admitted to the final examination.

Penmanship.

The system of Penmanship now generally acknowledged by teachers and business men to be superior to all others is the Spencerian, and it has been introduced into this College. Under this superior plan of instruction, any, even the most awkward writer, can acquire a rapid, legible, and handsome handwriting, by faithfully devoting to it a small fraction of his time during the course.

Telegraphy.

All over the country there is a continual call for young men to take charge of telegraph offices. Competent operators command at all times good salaries; and any one, in the course of three or four months, at an expense of seventy-five or a hundred dollars, can fit himself for a position worth from five hundred to a thousand dollars a year. No position is so paying, pleasant and honorable, for the sacrifice made to obtain it as this

In view of the importance attached to this Art, we have fitted up three telegraph offices, and have supplied them with all the conveniences and fixtures of the very best offices.

Telegraphy is not in the regular course. It has been found, however, that by devoting an hour or two each day to this, students who take the regular course can complete it very nearly as soon as those who devote all their time to it. Certificates are given to those who thoroughly complete it.

Business Arithmetic.

The student is thoroughly instructed in the best and most practical methods of computing interest, percentage, discount, commission, taxes, insurance, brokerage, equation of payments, allegation, exchange, loss and gain, currencies, co-partnership, settlements, etc., etc.

Correspondence.

Very special attention is given to this important branch of a business education, in which, on the part of so many, there is a lamentable deficiency. Letters are written upon topics assigned by the teachers, which are carefully criticised, both in orthography and construction.

Commercial Law.

A thorough knowledge of this part of the course is obtained by the student, not only from a course of study, but from lectures delivered by accomplished lawyers.

Library and Reading-Room.

Commercial students, by paying the sum of twenty-five cents per term, can have access to the Academy Library and Reading-Room, the latter of which is supplied with the best religious, political, and educational papers and periodicals.

General Information.

BOARD.—Students can board and room in the Hall, upon same terms as Seminary Students. See page 37.

STATIONERY AND BOOKS.—The entire cost, including the Commercial Arithmetic, is about $16.00 Two works on Book-keeping have been prepared by F. H. Stalford, expressly for the use of students of this College; one for the Theoretical Department, and one for the Actual Business Department. All the stationery required for the course is sold at the office of the Commercial College. Blank books of the very best material have been manufactured, adapted to the several sets of book-keeping of this Department. The forms of the different sets have been taken from the best business establishments in the country.

PREPARATORY QUALIFICATIONS.—A common school education is all that is required to enter. If the student is found deficient in any part of it, he can be instructed by teachers, not only in the college, but by those in the academic department.

TIME REQUIRED.—The time required to complete the Commercial Course will vary with the advancement, ability, and application of the student. Some will complete it in twelve weeks, others would not do it in twenty. The average term is about sixteen weeks. Individual instruction is given, and the student can proceed as rapidly as he chooses. There is no vacation in the Commercial College except during the long vacation in summer.

The superior advantages enjoyed at this Commercial College, and the adaptation of our system of instruction to prepare young men for active life, are evident from the fact that our graduates take high rank as business men in all parts of the country, and many of them are now occupying responsible and lucrative positions in almost all the various departments of business.

Address:

D. PATTEN, S. T. D., Registrar,

20 Beacon Street, Boston.

"I know but little of the new Boston University, beyond what is stated in the newspapers; but that little is enough—if they tell the truth—to show that it is one of the most important educational enterprizes, if not the most important, ever undertaken in America."—Col. T. W. HIGGINSON, in The Woman's Journal.

"Boston University has set before it at the outset of its career the highest educational aims of both hemispheres, and appears in the intellectual arena determined to be the most comprehensive and generous training school for humanity in the world. German, English, and American experience and ideas are all drawn upon in the plan of its organization. * * * * It is said that its Law School is already disputing the palm with that of Harvard."—The Atlantic Monthly.

"It is not always easy to determine what are the most important and sufficient events in the times in which we live. * * * * Boston University, which has so quietly established itself in our midst, with scarcely the 'sound of hammer,' seems to us to be one of those enterprizes destined to exert a greater influence for good than many of the more pretentious institutions that assume so much importance in the annals of the times. * * * * Such unprecedented growth is due to the fact, that, while availing themselves of the experience of the past in this and other countries, the founders have put the institution in harmony with the spirit of the age. Untrammeled by tradition they seem to have exercised a wise electicism, availing themselves of the best, and providing for what is called for by present exigencies. The controlling ideas which have governed in its organization are distinctly stated in its YEAR BOOK, and are such as to commend themselves to all the friends of thorough and progressive education."—Massachusetts Teacher.

"A city is in itself a great University, Boston particulary so, and the plan of this institution, as rightly indicated by its name, is to organize into a great educational corporation the means of instruction so abundantly spread out in that city. Other colleges and universities gather their corps of instructors only by arduous selection, and at great expense, and even then many find it difficult to create that society of letters and atmosphere of culture so essential to the growth of scholars."—Springfield Republican.

"In one particular Boston University takes a step boldly in advance of any of the American Universities which have recently resolved to admit women as students: it admits women as professors. * * * * It is to Boston we are indebted for Dr. Clark's book on SEX IN EDUCATION, and it is to Boston that we are indebted for the most tremendous counterblast to its doctrines."—Christian Union.

"We scarcely know which to admire more, the depth of policy, or the simplicity of purpose, or the integrity of motive, or the placidity of courage, which we are called upon to contemplate."—ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS, in The Independent.
